

Oshun Overflows

Me in front of you.
You in front of me.

Reflecting or viewing: Face to reflection (self); face to view (you).

You are beyond my reflection.

If I am to truly see you, I must look beyond myself.

Mind to mind.
Mystery to unknown.
Similarities to singularities.
Across the spectrum.

Which lens will it be?

Do I see you or do I only see myself?
Do you see me or do you only see yourself?

Mirror or glass.
One way or two ways.
Like me or like me, but totally unique.

In front:
Face to Face (opposing directions).
Face to Back (other in front, possibly leading).

Back to back:
Opposing directions, yet connected.

Next to:
Same direction.
Opposite direction
Perpendicular direction.

It takes time to see a piece of me having a unique experience.
It takes respect not to interfere.
It takes agency not to be influenced.
It takes depth perception to see the whole.

When I look at you, am I seeing you — or am I seeing myself?
And are you doing the same with me?
